

Call Him Vile Names

Ward Ricker

Ward Ricker

$\text{♩} = 120$

G D G D G D

If you can-not answer some-one's ar-gu-ments, hope is not all lo-st, no need to die in shame. If you can-not think of some-thing clev-er that makes sense,

4 C D G D G D

$\text{♩} = 112$

7 G D C D G G C

you can al-ways glo-wer and call him vile names! Our world's cli-mate, it, seems to be chang-ing,
My po-li-ti-cal par-ty's can-di-date,
Re-cent-ly at a par-ty a bald old

10 D G C D

so it does appear. he's sure-ly the best. man I chanced to meet. At least that's the o-pin-ion of my first cou-sin, oh so dear.
His char-ac-ter, in-te-gri-ty, they just stand out from the rest.
At first he seemed to be so nice, and he talked to me so sweet.

Call Him Vile Names --Page 2

13 G C D G

We got in - to a big de-bate a - bout this just the oth - er day,
 This I told to my neigh-bor in a dis - cus - sion the oth - er day,
 But some mish-mash a - bout e - vo - lu - tion he thendid at me throw, and somedoubtsthat I had in my head I just had to con vey.

15 C D

 but he just wouldnot lis - ten. His ownthoughts he had to con - vey.
 claim - ing that we e - volvedfromapes a few mil - lion years a go.

17 G C D G

He kept on ex - plain-ing the pro - cess heclaimsis tak - ing place,
 He then said that my can-di - date had re-cent-ly been in jail.
 I told him I did - n't be - lieve that was how we came to be, cit-ing sta - tis - tics and the re - search on which this view is based.

19 C D

 Just because he'd done re-searchhe thought his wis - dom I would hail.
 but he just kept on giv-ing me facts from pale - on - to - lo - gy.

21

G C D G

I got tired of list'n-ing to his spew and set the re - cordstraight.
 But I showed him a thing or two, and I shut his mouth up tight.
 Final - ly, I had all I could take and put himright in his place,

23

C D G

Told him that his face wassuch a mess, and he was just an in - grate!
 Pip-ingright up, I bold-ly said he was just an old trog - lo - dyte!
 told him his grand - pa was a ba - boon, and he had his grand-pa's face!